Dripping Springs, Texas – Dripping Springs Farmers Market has been rockin’ this summer with the generous donation of seven wooden rocking chairs from the Greenlee family and Furniture in the Raw.

Harriet Greenlee, owner and president of Furniture in the Raw, has been a loyal shopper at the farmers market since its inception and has watched it grow into the bustling market it is today. “I wanted to honor our local growers and this is my way of giving back,” Greenlee said.

Dripping Springs Farmers Market Manager Stacy Qualls said the new rocking chairs donated by the Greenlee family are a permanent attraction and wonderful addition at the market. “People have been delighted by the new rockers,” she said. “Now market-goers can sit down, take a break, rock a little, and listen to live music or visit with their friends or family.”

Qualls also commented that the rocking chairs are a wonderful gift because studies have shown that they are good for your health and well-being. “They are more than just a chair... there is something so relaxing, so rejuvenating, and calming about sitting in them,” she added. “We are thrilled to give our visitors to the market another healthy benefit of shopping with us and we are thankful for the Greenlee’s generosity.”

Harriet Greenlee was recognized at the June 9th Regular City Council meeting for her donation of the rocking chairs.
